SO THEY CRITICIZE

We are not yet out of the age of my-hs. For example, recently a story was broadcasted through the country which pictured the president in the role of an executive who sought to increase his power over the decisions of various semi-independent boards to the extent that he had adopted a practice of demanding that his appointees file their resignations with him in advance of their assuming office in order that he thus might control their official activities. The story was hung on the person of Mr. Lewis, a former member of the tariff commission.

The facts deserve recording. Mr. Lewis was a member of the commission whose term was expiring. Sometime in advance of the expiration of his term, the president decided a change was necessary and notified Mr. Lewis he was not to be reappointed. Directly following this announcement a member of the commission waited on the president, advising him that Mr. Lewis was engaged in finishing a most important work and that his retirement would result the scrapping of the investigation work thus involving the government in a new investigation at great additional cost.

In appreciation of these representations officially made, the president agreed to continue Mr. Lewis beyond the expiration of his term with a recess of appointment so the work might be completed. At the same time, to prevent misunderstanding, Mr. Lewis was advised why he was given the recess of appointment, and too, re-advised that at the completion of this work, his appointment would cease, and he was not to be reappointed. To prevent misunderstanding, the intimation was given that it would be well if Mr. Lewis in a formal communication made plain he understood the conditions of his appointment. It is out of this molehill the mountain was developed.

HOW THE COLONISTS TRAVELED

We of the Twentieth century are so accustomed to travelling in comfort and making journeys at great speed that we can scarcely realize what an undertaking any sort of journey was in colonial days.

There were three modes of travel. One could go by horseback, and this was really the preferred method, as well as the quickest. Or one could go by stage coach. Or one could walk.

Nowadays, we take out the automobile to go a mile. And we wouldn't think of walking if there were a street car to be had. The only walking we do in good earnest is when we get into sweaters and khaki and go for a wiener roast and hike.

But in those days they walked because it was necessary if they were too poor to own a horse. They walked distances, and uncomplainingly too.

Some of the towns didn't even have roads that could be called roads. They were more like Indian trails. The best roads were in Pennsylvania. The great as well as the humble made journeys on foot.

One writer tells us that when a farmer went off to church on a bright Sunday morning, he mounted his horse; his wife sat on a pillow behind him and off they trotted. The children all walked. But just before they got to the meeting-house, they would stop and change their shoes so as to look spick and span as they went down the aisle.

It was quite late in the seventeenth century before stagecoaches became very common. They were uncomfortable things at best. The seats were hard and bare and uncomfortable as could be. The roads were bumpy and stony—where there were roads at all—and sometimes the coach didn't even have any springs.

Of course if one was going any distance, the trip would take several days. The inns along the coach route were nothing like the hotels we have nowadays. The beds were hard and the food was unappetizing.

It is no wonder that most of the colonists preferred to live and marry and die in the community in which they were born, rather than hazard a trip in a stage-coach.

FROCKS OF COMMANDING SMARTNESS

Paris likes to feature the frock that defines the figure rather pronouncedly as far down as the waistline, then takes a flare toward the hem. The new striped taffetas or crepe satins may be used for the development of the figure to the left, which has side panels graduating from beneath the armhole to the lower edge of the skirt. Plain silk forms the collar, with tie-string included. Medium size requires 3 1/2 yards 40-inch figured and 3/4 yard plain material.

Commanding in its trimness and chic is the jumper model to the right, the jumper gathered at either side of the front to simulate a yoke effect. There is a trimming-band straight down the front, and the pocket is ornamented with applique embroidery. Buttons trim the long close-fitting sleeves. Medium size requires 4 1/2 yards 36-inch material, with 1 1/2 yard lining.

THOUSANDS OF SCHOOLS IN U. S. NOW TEACHING THRIFT
By S. W. STRAUS,
President American Society for Thrift.

THE last ten years have witnessed tremendous strides in this country along various lines of endeavor, but in none of these has greater progress been shown than in the matter of thrift education.

S. W. STRAUS

National Education Association. At that time a committee was appointed to go into the entire question. It was first necessary for the committee to satisfy itself of the educational need of such an addition to an already heavily burdened curriculum. Having reached the conclusion that such steps were needed in order to bring the school system of the country to a point of the greatest possible service, it was then necessary to map out definite courses of study.

The preparation of these courses has taken years of effort on the part of the National Committee on Thrift Education of which Mr. Arthur H. Chamberlain has been chairman since its organization at Oakland, Calif., in August, 1915.

The task is not yet completed but courses of study have been worked out and introduced in the schools. Thousands of our boys and girls are today receiving definite instructions in thrift, and the number is increasing daily.

The point has been reached where it may be said that thrift in the schools of America is an accomplished fact, and great praise is due the National Education Association and the National Council of Education for the contribution of this gift to practical education.

The GOLDEN COCOON

RUTH CROSS

Copyright, 1924, by Harper & Brothers
"The Golden Cocoon" with Helene Chadwick is a picturization of this novel by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS
Molly Cochran, wife of the Governor, threatened with exposure of an innocent, but suspiciously appearing incident in her girlhood life, leaves a note telling her husband she is determined to follow a literary career, and goes from Texas to New York. There she reads an article in a newspaper telling of her drawing when a canoe capsized. In reality she has voluntarily "lost" herself rather than imperil her husband's political career.

CHAPTER XXVII
One vicious hot morning in late August—two Augusts after the war had broken out in Europe—the bureau from which Molly had occasional part-time work called up. Myron Eldredge had a book to be typed. His secretary had quit in a huff. He was a difficult man to work for, and he had the vilest handwriting on earth. Would she care to try it?

Molly would. At that particular juncture she would have under taken to type a book in ancient Attic for Beelzebub, prince of Devils.

Myron Eldredge's apartment was in one of those shabby new studio places overlooking an ancient square. Twelve stories up, a trim maid opened the door and ushered her into the most beautiful room she had ever seen.

The maid returned to say that Mr. Eldredge would see her directly. Did she care to look over the manuscript? She led the way to a smaller room, beautiful too, after its fashion, but very simply furnished.

"Stop that infernal machine a minute, won't you?" he ordered irritably.

With a typewriter desk, a chair or two, and a chintz-covered bed.

When Molly saw the manuscript her heart faltered within her. She had not supposed that any handwriting could prove too much for her, but this was a genius all its own. After thirty minutes of the most concentrated effort of which she was capable, she had made out less than a dozen words. She pushed the manuscript from her. In the activeness of her disappointment tears rushed involuntarily to her eyes—spattered on the mahogany desk.

At that moment, the door opened and Myron Eldredge came in—or rather bolted in. His every movement had the abrupt, jarring energy of a man who keeps his internal motor running all the time at top speed. He came in in the doorway to light a cigarette, and Molly made short shrift with the tears. She had time even for a fleeting observation or two. He was tall, wiry, brown-haired; the lean-brownness emphasized rather startlingly by the light summer things he wore. Stubby, light-brown hair, ironic steel-gray eyes behind huge, tortoise-shell glasses, a face somewhat accented with overwork and overburden—she guessed that he was at least ten years younger than he looked.

He seemed in no hurry now, however. He stood there smoking and looking at Molly with a detached, impersonal sort of interest; sizing her up, no doubt, as a possible interpreter of Sanscrit.

"Pardon me," he said at last, "but you do look too absurdly young—in that straight-up, down thing with the white—what do you call 'em—collars and cuffs? Ah, I have it," he breathed a sigh of relief, "you look precisely like a little choir boy in vestment—that picture, you know." That was what he had been trying to puzzle out.

"It's the dress," Molly explained, unsmiling. "I always buy misses' sizes. They come cheaper."

"Hum! I see." He lighted another cigarette and offered her one, which she refused. "And so you've given me up, too?" he observed presently. "Well, you're the sixteenth in the last day and a half—and this weather, too. I'm just about threadbare." He ran a tentative handkerchief round inside his collar, took off the glasses and mopped his forehead. "Nothing short of blackmail, anyhow, you know, that accused female leaving me in the hole like this—sabotage. She knows she's the only person on earth who can read my handwriting."

"Perhaps if you could help me a little. . . ." Molly suggested. "I started. . . ." My dear young lady, you don't imagine for a minute that I can read it, do you? When Molly made no answer, but only went on gazing despairingly at the manuscript, he added with an abrupt, pouncing glance. "They told you I was willing to pay double the usual rates, didn't they? This thing's got to be in the hands of the printers not later than the fifteenth of September."

"Surely you can help me a little," Molly said again, wearily. "You must know at least what it's about."

He gave her another pouncing glance—humorous and a trifle uncertain. Then he pulled up a chair. For an hour they struggled together over the first chapter. "If you can make out with it somehow, I'm your debtor for life."

At four o'clock he returned. He propped himself with pillows in a corner of the couch, lighted a cigarette—then tossed the pillows across the room with a muttered ejaculation that they were "too damned hot." Soon he was absorbed in comparing Molly's freshly typed sheets with the original.

Thirty minutes later he suddenly left off shuffling papers. "For the love of Heaven, stop that infernal machine a minute, won't you?" he ordered irritably. "It's getting on my nerves—it and this heavy heat." Then as Molly's flying fingers hung suspended over the keyboard, "Besides, I want to ask you a question or two."

"Well," she said, without turning round, "I supposed it was something about the manuscript."

He got up, took off the tortoise-shell glasses, and came over to the other side of the desk. He stood so for some minutes looking down at her—still with that detached, impersonal sort of interest. "You take it from me, you can't buck this game—not by yourself. You're not made that way. They'll knock you down and shove you under and trample on you, and nobody'll ever be the wiser. I know you're up against it and up against it hard, or you'd never have tackled that hellish job there. Now you just accept a little fatherly advice. Clear out for Dixie and your own folks—and clear out quick!"

There was a moment's silence, then Molly said, "You're very kind, but I'm afraid I can't—clear out."

"You haven't got the money?"

She glanced away from him. "That's not all. . . ."

"You haven't murdered somebody, have you?" His eyes twinkled. Molly hadn't. She looked before her. He was looking at her how nice they were when he had the trituration out of them and the ugly big glasses off. "Anyhow, they don't hold that against you long in Texas!"

"How do you know I'm from Texas?"

"Thy tongue betrayeth thee, fair chorister." His mouth twisted humorously over the fresh cigar he was in the act of lighting.

At the outside door downstairs the breathless maid overtook her with an envelope. It contained her pay—double rates, as he had said—for a week in advance.

CHAPTER XXVIII
Two weeks later Eldredge came down to Molly's place one evening to bring the final chapters of the book. It was September then, and one of the sudden shifts of climate made a little fire on the hearth pleasant.

"Nice spot you've made for yourself here," he observed, as he stretched his long, lean body on an easy chair before the grate. His eyes registered critical approval—approval and something besides. "I did it all myself," Molly hastened to explain, "bought the things at auction, then dyed, painted, upholstered."

He nodded. "I know. Some women have the trick—take a dry-goods box and make a home out of it."

"I'm not really so badly off as it looked that day," she went on after a slight hesitation, "not quite. I let two rooms here, which takes care of my rent. Of course, there are tight squeezes, but—I'm afraid the truth is, I prefer to be poor."

"Um-m! So."

"You see, I like having my mind for myself."

"Hum-m! And what, if I may ask, do you do with your mind?"

She made a longer pause. When she spoke there was a faint tinge of defiance in her voice. "I'm trying to write. I've said a story or two, but what I want is to do plays."

Eldredge let out a low, profound, impressive whistle. "The Lord have mercy upon your soul! No money—nothing—wants to write plays. . . ."

CROWDS CHEER OPERA STAR ON ANNIVERSARY

By CORINA WRIGHT
Society's Renowned Singer and Writer.
(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, March 6.—The general public is prone at times to regard great singers as capricious birds whose conduct does not savor of the kindly human qualities of everyday existence, but a little drama was staged when Ernestine Schumann-Heink returned to the Metropolitan Opera House stage, which showed that genuine feeling and emotion are often lurking back stage in a big opera house. The occasion was a matinee performance last week of "Rheingold" in celebration of Mme. Schumann-Heink's anniversary of her operatic career.

She had received innumerable curtain calls from the audience, and as the curtain fell she started to go back to her dressing room, flushed and beaming with pleasure. Another ceremony commenced. Marion Halley, the youngest prima donna, stepped forward, and was the first to congratulate the oldest one. Schumann-Heink unfolded the girl in her arms and planted an affectionate kiss on the embarrassed girl's cheek. "You are a darling," exclaimed Mme. Schumann-Heink, "and I wish you all the luck in the world in this long career you have before you." Miss Halley, smiling happily, thanked the singer and told her that she had always been an inspiration.

The stately gods and goddesses still in their make-up descended from Valhalla and joined in the felicitations, while camera men seemed to appear from nowhere and recorded the scene.

Jeritza has added a new heroine to her list of roles. Although she suffered from a sprained ankle she refused to disappoint a concert audience in Brooklyn and was carried on the stage by her husband, Baron Von Popper. It was not until the concert was over that the audience learned of her indisposition.

Jeritza sprained her ankle after a concert in Worcester, given the week before, but did not cancel the Brooklyn engagement hoping to recover. Her injury continued painful and when she reached the Brooklyn academy she was unable to walk. Her husband carried her into the dressing room and then onto the stage.

Two curtains were lowered and arranged so that the audience could not see what was going on. Von Popper carried his wife back and forth five times, propped her against the piano on which she leaned, standing on one foot. At the end of each appearance the curtain was lowered, and Jeritza was carried back into her dressing room.

LONDON OPERA SEASON WILL DRAW SOCIETY

(By Universal Service)
LONDON, March 6.—One of the surprises of the week has been the rush for boxes for the coming opera season at Covent Garden. The list is headed by King George and Queen Mary and nearly all the leading hostesses have put their names down. American subscribers who have reserved boxes include: Mrs. Henry R. Fern, Jr. and Mrs. Arthur Locke, of New York; Mrs. Kenneth Reid, of Philadelphia; Mrs. James S. Craig, of Boston, and several well known Anglo-Americans, among whom are Lady Astor, Duchess of Roxburgh, Mrs. Anthony Emmett, and Mrs. Ernest J. Stratton.

Many Americans were present at the levee held by the king at St. James' Palace this week. This picturesque royal function is essentially a male affair and nearly all the members of the American diplomatic corps in London were asked to attend. Those who went included Ambassador Houghton, Frederick A. Sterling, Baykston Real, Ray Atherton, William H. Taylor, Admiral MacNamee, and Major Stewart Davidson.

The American diplomats stood out noticeably in their sober dress against the brilliant uniforms of British officials and the representatives of other nations.

Lady Astor who has been absent from her accustomed seat in parliament since the riding accident to her son, is now back in London. She usually wears some clothes in the House of Commons, but this week appeared at a late session in evening dress. She was entertaining a large party at the Berkeley hotel the same evening, and followed the example of some of the male members in wearing evening clothes.

She wore a low cut blue and gold gown and necklace of diamonds.

of Deputies is mentioned. There is discussion also of Anatole Deming, the new minister of public works, who has made a record for himself. But when a scarred veteran of Briand's political and international experience and sagacity cannot control the chamber other candidates appear dwarfed.

Callaux was the only one of the three given prominence by actual events. He conferred for more than half an hour with Briand this afternoon, but both parties to the conference were silent thereafter and conjecture only could be built on the news. The former Finance Minister had not been called to the Palace to confer with President Doumergue.

Liberte shot and ominous note into the situation today by its editorial comment which read: "In politics nothing is accomplished except by force."

"Like Italy, France will save herself but it would be folly for the younger generation to wait until their elders cede to them the direction of affairs."

At this meeting, David Wardee, a newly naturalized citizen gave the club a talk upon the benefits of American Citizenship. Wardee gave a wonderful talk upon the subject.

MINTER IS TO OPEN NEW CAR SALESROOMS

A lease has been taken on the first floor of the new building at 1329 Macdonald avenue by A. B. Minter, owner of the Twenty-second street garage and Richmond agent for the Oakland and Pontiac motor cars. He will use the place as a salesroom and show room while he will maintain a service garage at Twenty-second street garage.

"A Workingman's Car for a Workingman's Town," sold by a Workingman, is the slogan adopted by Minter who claims to be the oldest garageman in this city. He opened his first business here in 1912. He has had 34 years' experience in mechanics and engine building and will specialize in this work.

The middle of March will probably be the opening date of the new salesrooms.

Numerous entertainment features marked the opening of the new salesroom and service department yesterday. A full line of 1926 Chevrolets on the floor of the establishment was one of the features of the opening.

New Types of Cars Are Made to Satisfy Dealers' Aim to Have A Complete Line of Machines

By ROY C. HAYES,
Universal Service Automobile Editor.

DETROIT, Mich., March 6.—Three new automobiles are preparing to brave the rigors of the highly competitive automobile business this spring. At least three more will be introduced later on in the year.

The three newcomers about to howl are the new Marry Six, which will make its debut at the Boston automobile show tonight; a light six in the $1,000 class to be introduced this spring by the Moon Motor Car company of St. Louis and the Worldmobile Eight-In-Line, sponsored by the Worldmobile company of Cleveland.

Just as none of the three mentioned are Detroit products, all of the second trio are to be built here. All of the three Detroit products in sight are to be launched by large established automobile manufacturers. Two of the cars will be light sixes and one a low priced four cylinder car.

A notable trend at the moment in the policies of the larger companies is the tendency toward a more complete line of automobiles. Manufacturers, with an eye to independence and at the same time to provide their dealer organizations with a full line of cars in all classes are rounding out their offerings.

An instance of this is the new Moon product which will be introduced shortly. Moon dealers will then have a light six, a medium priced six and an eight-in-line car. With this variety to offer, Moon dealers should be in position to satisfy the great majority of those who invade their show rooms in quest of a car.

Willys Overland dealers now have four cars to sell; Nash three; Chrysler three; Durant four; Gardner three; Anderson three, etc.

General Motors is spending $3,500,000 in extending plant facilities to take care of increased business. Part of this sum is to be expended on the General Motors proving grounds at Milford, Mich., 48 miles from Detroit. Here in this most unique motor car laboratory, General Motors engineers test their own and other makes of cars. Every type of road, good, bad and indifferent, is represented in the variety of roadways that chart the 1,125 acre property.

A four mile oval speed loop and a mile and three eighths straight away, embodying a "measured mile," are features of the layout. Grades of all types and sports are provided, from the smallest angle to 21 per cent. Clay, sand, brick, concrete, macadam and mud, in fact every surface and nearly every road condition is exemplified.

The proving grounds is devoted chiefly to two purposes, according to O. T. Kreusser, general manager, division of the General Motors that contemplate the introduction of a new car conduct their own experiments there. If they require the assistance of the proving grounds' staff, it is available. The principal work of the proving grounds' staff is the comparison of General Motors cars with products of other companies.

If a competitor brings out a new car, embodying innovations or "advances," the proving grounds staff tests the newcomer, so that General Motors engineers may have the benefit of the latest accomplishments at all times.

An idea of the exhaustive tests conducted by General Motors engineers may be gleaned from the fact that 3,500,000 car-miles were operated at the proving ground last year. Even in winter, road tests are going on at the rate of 200,000 car-miles a month. More than 25,000 gallons of gas are consumed monthly.

One might rightly imagine that because of his training and his position, Kreusser wouldn't be the best qualified man in the industry to answer the question "What is the best motor car?"

If you want his answer to the question here it is: "We shall never be able to tell you which is the best motor car. A car is much like a pair of shoes. It won't fit all people. Then again, one car will excel in one phase of performance, another in another. The ideal is difficult to attain.

"Needs of individuals differ. What might be a good car for you, probably would not be the proper car for me. Tastes provide another factor."

Kreusser outlined four points concerning, which he says, the car owner of today is most interested in.

1. Freedom from noise.
2. Freedom from vibration.
3. Riding comfort.
4. Paint, finish and appearance.

More automobiles are being built this month by the Chevrolet Motor company than ever before, were produced in a single month by any manufacturer of modern three speed gear shift cars. The schedule, which constitutes a new monthly record for Chevrolet, calls for more than 57,000 passenger cars and trucks. According to W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the company, this total is more than 14,000 greater than the production during March of 1925.

Production at the Oakland factory in Pontiac has been increased to 449 Oakland and Pontiac cars daily. The present rate of output represents a 300 per cent increase over the corresponding period of last year. More than 600 employees are being added to the payroll.

MEN FAVORING NEW STYLES IN DRESS COLLARS

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, March 6.—Strong coffee and starch collars have started off many a man on a day of strife, according to nerve specialists.

For years men have been putting the great American collar, buying anything offered on the theory that the perfect product was sure to happen along some time.

The collar lottery is the greatest of all lotteries; a gamble in which many participate and a few win. The majority of white collar men will buy any kind of a collar at any time, providing they have never worn it before. And thereby hangs a narrative.

Just preceding the recent starched collar revolt the world was electrified with a semi-soft collar that won many non-believers. This model represented a merging of the stiff collar and the soft collar.

And now freedom of the arteries is further assured by a semi-stiff collar, a light-weight offering said to possess style as well as comfort. A number of collar fans—collar first-nighters, so to speak—claimed that the stiff collar was uncomfortable and added after brief experiments that the semi-soft collar lacked style. The newcomer among collars is heralded as the answer to a white collar addict's prayer.

Manufacturers of collars generally are interested in checking the tendency in many quarters to wear soft collar attached shirts. With that aim in view the "demi-collar" has made its appearance in several guises. It is a sexless product; a cross between stiff and soft collars. There is no doubt of the popularity of comfort collars.

The well dressed man is principally concerned with knowing which to buy. Inasmuch as one man's collar is another man's tormenter every man's conscience must be his guide. There is no doubt, however, that many well dressed men are taking up these collar substitutes, and, in New York it is no longer considering fashions to wear a "trick" collar. Men were wedded for many years to grotesque collars of stone wall proportions and qualities, but there is a democratic drift in such matters nowadays that encourages all sorts of departures. Any collar that is comfortable and becoming to the individual is approved at present.

One by One They're Seeing the Light of "The New Day"

But Only The NEW-DAY JEWETT SIX offers all these features

- Lightning-like acceleration.
- Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.
- Abundant power and speed for any driving need.
- Easiest steering, shifting, and parking of any car built.
- Clear vision—almost total elimination of the deadly "blind-spot"—steel body.
- Interior Roominess equal to much longer cars.
- Paige quality throughout in materials and workmanship.
- And Jewett's lowest closed car price.

IT IS inevitable that every motor car manufacturer will follow Jewett's lead and some day build a truly "New Day" motor car.

Already these others are beginning to see the light of this new day. One by one they are adding new devices, making hurried changes here and there, "dressing up" their present models as best they can.

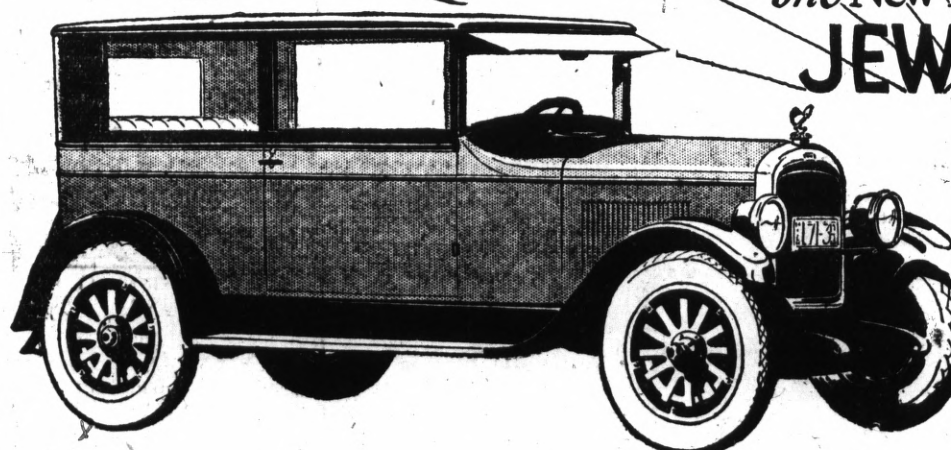

What else can they do? Production schedules cannot be cancelled over night. Raw materials and finished parts must be used up. But since Jewett's epochal achievement the public is clamoring for "New Day" cars—for new types of motor cars—and so we find a hint of the "New-Day" here and a suggestion of it there—but only in The New-Day Jewett Six can you find a truly new day car.

There is only one way to build a truly new day car. That's to design it from the ground up to meet and master the certain specific needs and conditions that this new day of congested traffic has brought.

This is what Jewett did. This is what they all must do. Jewett sensed the coming of this new day long ago—and Jewett has been designing and building and testing its New-Day Jewett Six for years!

You can't turn time back. The "New-Day" is here—and here to stay. One by one they're seeing the light of this new day—but only The New-Day Jewett Six was ready and waiting when that day dawned.

Drive this New-Day car soon—it's as different from ordinary cars as night is from day. And it's the only car of its kind in the world!

HYPNOTIST AT HEAD OF BILL AT CALIFORNIA

Madame Zulieka, known the world over as the only woman hypnotist, will be the headline attraction at the California Theatre today, in conjunction with the screen feature "Thank You", John Golden's play hit.

Madame Zulieka's comprehensive presentation of Psycho Analysis is offered with a vein of comedy that does not however detract from the educational and entertaining value of the offering. Something new in mysticism is shown and the audience are kept in a summer of amusement as well as having their interest held from start to finish.

The bill opens merrily with Maude Fox and Pals introducing Teddy and Toney performing Raccoons. Several boys are also seen in this clever animal novelty which includes some unusual tricks that are almost human in their interpretation. A good many laughs are gotten from the queer antics of these simian wonders and their companions.

The Hernandez Brothers recent arrival from South America in disguise with some haunting melodies on stringed instruments that are pleasing.

George Rowland "The boy from Dixie" with his negro impersonations of the burlesque type has a likeable personality and some chatter that is funny.

"Lilt and Laughter" is what Talbert and Briscoe cause during their short dissertation on the subject of marriage.

Movie patrons of the California are assured of one of the season's rare treats when "Thank You", is screened today.

This William Fox production of the John Golden state play is presented by an all-star cast that seldom has been equalled for quality in the history of pictures. Heading the players are George O'Brien, Jacqueline Logan and Alec B. Francis, while the supporting members include J. Farrell MacDonald, George Fawcett, James Neill, William Courtwright, Marion Harlan, Vivian Oden, Edith Bostwick and Frankie Bailey. John Ford, remembered chiefly for his wonderful direction of "The Iron Horse," also wielded the megaphone in "Thank You."

The photodrama deals with the troubles and persecutions visited upon a small-town minister whose salary is woefully inadequate to his daily needs.

Mexico Is the Background for Film at Richmond

With languorous and beautiful Mexico as a background and a thrilling story of love and intrigue set in it like a jewel, Mae Murray is said to have the best role of her career in "Mademoiselle Midnight," her latest picture which will come to the Richmond theatre today.

"In 'Mademoiselle Midnight' Miss Murray plays two character roles—that of a French lady in the court of Napoleon III, and that of a daughter of Mexico, a senorita famed for beauty, wealth and cleverness.

The supporting cast is made up of many favorites, among them being Monte Blue, Robert McKim, Robert Edison, John Stampel, Otis Harlan, Nigel de Brulier, Nick de Ruiz and Evelyn Sobiech. Robert Z. Leonard directed and personally supervised the picture for Tiffany Productions. It is released by Metro.

The picture is divided into a prologue, showing the court of Napoleon III, at the time when Maximilian is being sent upon his tragic adventure as Emperor of Mexico, and the main story of modern Mexico.

"Mademoiselle Midnight" was written by Carl Harbaugh and John Russell and was photographed by Oliver T. Marsh.

Other features on the same program include "Fast and Furious," a Live Conley comedy riot of fun; "Kinograms" current news events.

Coming Monday and Tuesday—Percy Marmont in "The Streets of Forgotten Men," with Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton.

LONGEVITY OF SERVICE WINS AT STANDARD

More than twenty-eight per cent of the employees of the Standard Oil Company have been in the service for a period of over ten years. This interesting fact and the loyalty of the employees to the company was revealed yesterday when the membership of the "Order of Service" was given out.

The Order of the Service has been making a rapid growth; its membership now numbering 3,362. This is an increase of 2,862 employees since the plan was first started in 1916.

The original presentation of service pins at the beginning of 1916 found five hundred employees eligible to receive the little gold insignia. There were 186 pins to be distributed at the end of 1925, bringing the total number of members of the Order of Service to 3,362. The following is a tabulation of the service pins that are now being worn:

3-50-yr. pins, 5 diamonds.

R. U. H. S. Nine Beats U. C. Frosh

LOCAL NINE IN CLOSE GAME ON BERKELEY FIELD

Gray Knocks Homer for Local Team Bringing in Three Runs in Ninth

LOCALS WIN NINE TO EIGHT

Christy Gomez Allows Only Six Hits and Whiffs Twelve of The University Men

In one of the most thrilling games of the season the Richmond high school baseball nine defeated the California Freshman team at Berkeley yesterday by a score of 9-8. This is the first time in the history of the school that the local team has defeated a U. C. team and the Babes have a mighty fine team this year.

Christy Gomez was the star hurler for the local team. In nine furious innings he sent 12 men back to the bench and allowed but six hits. Jacobsen, pitcher for the Frosh team, allowed eight hits and struck out eight men.

The local team started off the day with two runs on errors and it was not until the third inning that the Babes were able to score the tying runs. Again in the fourth canto they scored two runs. In the fifth three runs were tallied for the local team, placing them in a good position. But the Babes came back in the sixth and scored three runs through errors, made by the high school nine.

Then started the day. For two innings the local team tried vainly to score. At the starting of the ninth they found the Frosh's pitcher's weak spot. The score stood 8-6 for the Frosh. With two men on base and one man out, Marvin Gray stepped up to the plate and took two wicked cuts at the ball. A terrific "crack" and the ball sailed in the general direction of University avenue. This home run brought in two runs and immediately following, a man made first and later stole second and third. A single brought in the winning run.

The Batteries: Richmond—Gomez and Gualdoni.

Frosh—Jacobsen and Wyatt.

HELEN LOSES DOUBLE MATCH

(By Universal Service)

MENTONE, France, Mar. 6.—Helen Wills was seen in the unaccustomed role of a loser here today as she and her partner, J. H. Van Allen went down to defeat in the International mixed doubles before the excellent team work of the French pair, Miss Didi Vlasto and Henri Cochet, 7-5, 6-3.

A crew of gallery of nearly two thousand players and spectators watched the French-American match to receive world wide publicity.

Miss Wills and Van Allen have both played together scarcely a week while Miss Vlasto and Cochet are a veteran doubles team. Despite the machine-like action of the French pair as they killed from overhead and volleyed at the net the individual brilliance of Miss Wills and her partner looked as though it might carry them throughout to a victory in the third and final set.

Their two game rally, in this stanza, however, crumbled before the team play of Miss Vlasto and Cochet and they never threatened after this.

The American champion and Van Allen defeated the French pair 6-3, 6-2, 6-0.

Marberry, Washington Senators' Famous Relief Moundsman, Warming Up Before Midwinter Fans

Girl Scouts Rummage Sale On Fashionable Washington Street Draws Crowd of Capital Ladies

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The idea is altogether incongruous but there it was—A rummage sale perched between a smart department store and an expensive flower shop on a promenade section of F. street.

It didn't look much like a rummage sale, for the second-hand things on display—everything from boudoir caps to had come out of the homes of fashionable, and mopey ladies swarmed the little place.

It was the girl scout's enterprise and the scouts are sponsored by some of the prominent ladies of the capital. The girls scoured the town for pretty things to sell so they can set up an honest-to-goodness coffee and waffle shop.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, the well-known author, was conspicuous among the place conspicuously, scouts being a hobby of hers. Mrs. Rinehart moves in the top ranks of society. The first lady had sufficiently recovered from her attack of the gripe. Washington's present pet beeve to accompany the president to the dinner given for them Tuesday night by the Postmaster-General and Mrs. New.

Mrs. Coolidge's illness was nothing serious, but being a thrifty soul she believes in an ounce of prevention. So she stayed in.

Speaking of the first lady reminds me of the muscades she has announced. There will be two at the White House this month, regular ten innings, you know, and one in May.

Executive muscades are traditional, more or less. Mrs. Taft was a musician herself and na-
